Message from the Acting Wing President

The first few months of the year have been relatively quiet, as our members appear quite busy trying to stay warm, shoveling snow, or taking a trip to someplace warmer to avoid the artic type weather all together, so I'm afraid this report will be quite short.

First, I want to thank the members of 783Wing for coming together and supporting our President while he continues to recover. I recently had the opportunity to visit him and he is doing remarkably well. His recovery is proceeding at an excellent pace, and his sense of humour and good spirts remain intact. Your visits and well wishes are truly helping to speed his recovery.

Our first few meetings of the year have gone very well, as we shuffle around in our positions to ensure that the members of our wing have the best possible experience, I promise the deer in the headlights look will fade, but until it does please continue to let know if I have missed anything or if there is something we can do to make the meetings a better and more meaningful experience. This certainly is one of the more exciting on the job training experiences I have had.

I would like to pass along our appreciation to those volunteers who assisted with the Air Cadet Selection Boards in Innisfail. The assistance and support you have shown to the Air Cadets provides them with a memorable and valuable experience. We couldn't do it without you.

I look forward to seeing you all at our next wing meeting, which hopefully will come with warmer weather, dryer roads and good health. Until then

Randy Fisher

New Wine for Seniors , I kid you not...

Clare Valley vintners in South Australia, which primarily produce Pinot Blanc, Pinot Noir, and Pinot Grigio wine, have developed a new hybrid grape that acts as an anti-diuretic.

It is expected to reduce the number of trips older people have to make to the bathroom during the night.

The new wine will be marketed as

One of the most devastating raids on London was when hundreds of bombs pounded the whole area causing the highest casualties. Among the majestic buildings that were hit was the House of Commons, the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, Buckingham Palace, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Royal Mint. It is hard to believe that London and the surrounding areas survived that time, also a miracle how one house could remain standing when all around were demolished.

Nightly, and for many weeks, air raids continued but somehow our daily domestic lives went on, including grocery shopping with our ration coupons, however no sweets, no chocolate, no toys, no comics, no bananas or oranges were available. Any time we were away from the safety of our home we were always conscious of the nearest air raid shelter. Sometimes it would be an underground rail station where hundreds of people slept every night too frightened to remain in their own homes. The sounds of war continued sporadically, the dreaded sirens and the frantic rush to the air raid shelters got to be almost a way of life, and being so young I just shrugged it off because everyone else seemed that it was the normal way of life. Our crackly radio still belting out the songs of the day:

There'll be bluebirds over

The white cliffs of Dover

Tomorrow just you wait and see

There'll be love and laughter

And peace ever after

Tomorrow when the world is free

The war ended in 1945. Great Britain lost more than 300,000 fighting men and women, 60,000 civilians and there were just too many injuries to count.

The effects of World War II war were still being felt, just a few years ago when a rusty 2,000 pound unexploded German bomb was uncovered in East London during the excavation for a 2012 Olympic venue; this bomb could have caused catastrophic damage, a huge crater and sent fragments flying more than half a mile away, it was destroyed by a controlled explosion.

The lucky survivors of the war had gone through hell; literally, and we still remember, to this day, the scariest sound of all: DEAD SILENCE.

I've really enjoyed telling you my story, many of you have had firsthand experience of the hardships of war, and I'm sure you are all aware of the importance of recording the memorable events in your life to preserve them for your children in the future. Although I am now an American citizen a little part of my heart still belongs to London. But today I do feel that during the war years the British people were at their best as never before or since. It was indeed their finest hour, for the first two years they stood alone in Europe, then they were on the rack for almost six years, most people neither sought nor glorified the war, and they gained nothing from it. There were many other factors of the war that I had no direct knowledge of including the Evacuation when 3,500,000 people (mostly children) were sent out of the cities (some even to the US and Canada) for their safety. I was just lucky like many to have survived and witnessed just a little of it.

NEWSFLASH

Last Month a Bomb was found in the Silt on The River Thames in London. The bomb was manually floated down the river to safe place and disposed of.

According to historians between September 1940 and may 1941, German planes dropped about 24,000 tons of explosive bombs on London and 10% of all the bombs that dropped did not detonate. And so it continues....

I have enjoyed sharing this story with you, it has helped me understand what happened during World War 11 when my sister was a child. I was born after the war and luckily I have not experienced anything like this. Sue

A gentleman was at the Cold War exhibit last week who turned out to be a Bomb Disposal Tech who is in this area to find unexploded bombs from the training area at Sarcee where the military was training during and after the war. Apparently this ammo washed down stream after our famous 2013 flood and is now popping up in spots nice to know eh?

Grant Whitson gave a brief history of past hockey teams from The war years which featured the Air Force Flyers. After speaking he modeled the Air Force Flyers jersey. (He needed security to get out of the building still wearing it).

Mural of Honour

The Mural project was launched in November 2005 as a fundraising project for the new Founders' Gallery at the Military Museums. The process of installing the Mural panels began in November 2006, and the completed mural was unveiled in the atrium of The Military Museums on 9 November 2007.

The 240 tiles that represent Canada's military history from the War of 1812 to present day operations are highlighted by an interactive display in the Museum's atrium. The collective stories reveal the different theatres of war Canadians have been involved in for nearly 200 years, including both overseas and domestic operations.

See this Mural in all it's glory at the Military Museum and be in awe at it's splendor.

You will be able to see the Mural at the Military Museum at our Charter Tea
